Call for submissions

Name of the Journal: Kōrero

In Maori, Kōrero means speech, narrative, story, news, account, discussion, conversation, statement, and information (not a direct translation).

Author Guidelines for the Online Journal

Submissions are encouraged by educational scholars and K-12 practitioners from all levels (K-12 and higher education). All papers are peer-reviewed promptly (2-3 weeks).

Examples of Topic:

1. Research and project papers related to all aspects Problem-Based Learning (PBL), service-learning in education, project-based learning, educational technology, and other areas in education, and teacher education;
2. Promising practices articles that describe and advocate specific education practices and procedures at various educational levels;
3. Perspective articles and personal opinion pieces about areas covered above;
4. Biographies within the scope of education, research, social justice, and advocacy. Other areas may still be considered.
5. Reviews of scholarly books and other educational media; and
6. News items and announcements about organizations, events, conferences, and different PBL and service-learning education programs. Kōrero is purposely broad in scope, for we wish to invite multiple voices to share their work. In submitting, authors need to indicate which category they are presenting.
